presentation of any evidence regarding drug quantity, insisting that the government was estopped from attributing to her any drugs deriving from transactions for which it had not held a codefendant, Calvin Powell, responsible in its plea agreement with him. The District Court² rejected her argument, and after an evidentiary hearing, determined that she was responsible for 73.90 grams of cocaine. Wood was sentenced to five months of incarceration and five months of home detention.

The District Court properly rejected Defendant's argument, which we agree was meritless. Accordingly, we affirm. See 8th Cir. R. 47B.
